One of the things in Psalms that really stood out to me was how creation was intertwined throughout. The majesty of God, the cosmic scale, and placing humanity in a position of honor (“a little lower than the angels”) to manage creation.

[Psa 8:3-5 ESV] 3 When I look at your heavens, the work of your fingers, the moon and the stars, which you have set in place, 4 what is man that you are mindful of him, and the son of man that you care for him? 5 Yet you have made him a little lower than the heavenly beings and crowned him with glory and honor.

The skies, sun, and firmament testify to God’s handiwork, functioning as a witness to our wonderful creator.

[Psa 19:1 ESV] 1 The heavens declare the glory of God, and the sky above proclaims his handiwork.

Ps. 104 details God’s ongoing providence over creation, describing trees, animals, the ocean, and the cycles of life and water.

Ps. 148 is a call for creation - sun, moon, stars, sea creatures, mountains, and trees - to praise the Lord.

Studying Psalms has reminded me of the awesomeness of God, how he created everything and that he deserves and longs for our worship. I’ve been humbled by the Psalms, and it makes me realize everything that God has done for me and reminds me of His neverending steadfast love.
